Introduction

In the September Amazon Aggregator survey, PNW Web Marketing reviewed 28 aggregators by capital raised and estimated health. For this report, we narrowed the list down to 3 of the largest aggregators who disclose their brands and dove deep into their sales.

These aggregators collectively own over a hundred brands, but we focused on just 2 brands from each aggregator for this review. Luckily more aggregators are publicly disclosing more of their brands than ever.

Thrasio

Thrasio has raised 3.4 billion to date – making them massive. It shows in more than just their funding, Thrasio has maintained a fairly deep bench of executives with former Amazon executives running a lot of the portfolio at this point.

However, Thrasio has not escaped from bad acquisitions or entire leadership changeovers. It is difficult to tell with Thrasio how well their portfolio is doing, and this is just a look at 2 of their brands.

Veva

Introduction

Veva was the most exciting brand to look at of the 6, they are in a trending high ASP home category – this type of brand has a broad customer base.

Veva makes home air purifiers and filters. It looks like Veva is focused on the US market but their products are available broadly as they are being resold on marketplaces by other sellers.
